

Gavin Vinstra

Color Reflection

After taking the True Color test, I have shown to be a Gold. The main traits, abilities, and behaviors that make up a gold include responsibility, trust, commitment, being meticulous, having good organization skills and dependability. These results do not surprise me at all. If I was asked to describe myself, I would have used some of these exact descriptions. If I were to ask my family or friends to describe me, I believe they as well would use some of these words. In particular, I would say I am very responsible, meticulous and organized. These play an important role in my life and the decisions I make. When I am told to do something, I make sure that I get it done to a high standard. I like having a place for all my things so I know where everything is at all times. Almost all of these characteristics that make up the gold fit to me and my life.

This test and these results give me added proof that I am who I think I am. Testing as a gold confirms my main characteristics of being meticulous, responsible and organized that I have seen in myself for many years. Knowing that these are things that actually will help me determine what kind of situations and environments will fit me and my personality in the future. It will help me decide what kind of people to surround and associate myself with. Also, I should be able to tell if I will be able to excel in a certain job or work situation. With these results, I will predict that I will end up in a job that can be with others, however I will have my own space and duties. This way I will be able to organize how I like and that will help lead me to being successful. Overall, I think these test results were very accurate and describe myself very well.

